Whether or not M Clemenceau was successful in his patriotic efforts to draw France and America closer together in international friendship, there was no doubt about his own personal popularity as a vast throng of Americans and French residents crammed the French pier, cheering shouting farwells and waving hats and hand-

REJECTION OF NEW PLAN TO END MEETINGS

Each to Go Own Way on Reparations if British Suggestion Is Unheeded

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Great Britain may not participate in the next conference of allied premiers in Paris, it was learned from an authoritative source today. The British treasury department is now drawing up a new reparations plan which will be submitted informally to France. If the French reject it Premier Bonar Law is likely to reply that further conferences are useless and each nation must go its own way in the future.

Members of the British cabinet are understood to be angry over the unbending policy of Premier Poincare of France, which was responsible for the breakdown of the meeting here on Monday.

Most of the British cabinet were said to believe that the German proposals while not entirely satisfactory, would have been suitable as the basis of further negotiations. In order not to risk collapse of allied unity, Premier Bonar Law, finally consented to the persuasions of the Belgians and Italians to put off further negotiations to a future date.

However, it is reported reliably in government circles that Bonar Law is convinced that further negotiations will be fruitless unless the French modify their demand for seizure of the Ruhr and Rhineland industrial belt

Premier Bonar Law will address commons tomorrow on British reparations and debt policy.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Though optimistic of what the coming year will bring to the United States William Jennings Bryan today emphatically denounced the "rule of the rich" that he claims now controls the country, and urged, as new policies that would strengthen the nation at home and abroad the giving of all possible moral support to European nations and a stringent enforcement of the prohibition laws by blunt talk to foreign powers.

The Commoner, in an exclusive interview with International News Service, saw little of the discouraging in the reported breakdown of the national and state machinery to cope with the liquor problem. Reports of the breakdown, he said, are greatly exaggerated.

Wants Labor Board

As a solution to the vexing labor problem he suggested boards of investigation that would make clear to the public the real state of affairs in the industries in question, relying upon public pressure to force agreements before actual strikes or lockouts occurred. But in the event of a strike or lockout Bryan advocated laws that would give the government the power to take over the industries and operate them for the public welfare until a settlement between the opposing sides is reached.

He said:

"I think it very unfortunate that we did not go into the league of nations, with reservations when we had an opportunity, and unfortunate again that the republicans did not carry out the promise of an association of nations.

"The name is immaterial and the details are comparatively unimportant. The outstanding fact is that we have a moral influence that we are not using and a world confidence is that not being employed as it should be.

"Europe seems unable to forget the past and plan for a future based upon international cooperation and good will and no nation except ours is in a position to act as a trusted adviser and bring about harmony.

"I am glad that we have a representative at Lausanne. I think that we should respond to every call for advice with the understanding that we reserve the right to decide for ourselves what we shall do and that we are not bound by any action taken by other nations in regard to European affairs.

—THE ELECTRIC LIGHT ORDINANCE—

IO PAYS THE LARGER INCREASE UNDER THE PROPOSED ELECTRIC LIGHT ORDINANCE ?

(An Editorial)

Yesterday, on the subject of the electric light orance, we spoke of the total amount of increase, prod for in the ordinance, being about one-third of the l now being paid. We suggested that this would, of rse, increase the average amount of each consumer's by one-third. If this were equally distributed to the consumers of the city, we each would have our increased by about 32 per cent, but this is not the .

Under the proposed ordinance there is $1.00 charg o each customer each month for a so-called readyerve charge. This one dollar must be paid by every umer of current every month whether he uses any ent at all or not.

Heretofore, we have had minimum charges but this inum charge would be credited on our bill in case ised any current, but under the present case, it will be credited.

Manifestly, this one dollar extra service charge per th is a great deal larger amount to the man whose has been $1.00 or less than it is to the man whose has been $3.00 or $4.00 or $5.00 or upward.

Now there is in the city about twenty-four per cent e homes which have averaged during the year $1.00 ss per month for electric current. If a man's bill been $1.00 on the average, and one dollar service ge would be added, the percentage of increase over what it had been, would be 100 per cent. If his bill had been 50c on the average, and his bill for electric current would remain the same, then this one dollar service charge which is added would cause him to pay an increase over his bill heretofore of 200 per cent per month on the average.

But inasmuch as the proposed ordinance has a fixed flat rate for current and this flat rate for current is less than the amount now charged, the man whose bill is 50c or 60c would save slightly in the total amount of his current so that instead of there being an increase of 200 per cent in his bill it would only amount to an increase of possibly 175 per cent.

But let us take a case which we have before us. This particular man used twelve killowatts, and for these twelve killowatts he was charged 76c. Under the new ordinance he would be charged 59c for his current and one dollar service charge, making the total $1.59. This would be a total increase to this man of over 100 per cent.

We have secured the figures from the Electric Light Company themselves and we have also had the city canvassed to get the figures from the homes of the users. As we have said, there are 24 per cent of the people whose bill is $1.00 or less on the average per month. The nearest to one dollar of any that we have had reported to us by the canvassers, where we have also the number of killowatt hours, is the amount of 94c for the month. Under the new ordinance instead of paying 94c this man would pay $1.69. This would be an increase on this man's bill of about 80 per cent. This, mark you, is very nearly the least percentage of increase that anyone of the homes, which are now paying $1.00 or less, would have to pay under the new ordinance. Eighty per cent is the least, and from that it would range on up to as high as 185 or 190 per cent. This is increase.

The people of course, who use the smallest amount of electric current are the ones, who from necessity or from choice are endeavoring to save in their expense. Some of these homes of course, are ones in which any item of expenditure must be watched with jealous care. Many of these homes are not those of the able bodied wage earners, for the poorest in our city as a matter of fact, are not of this group. There are many whose income is fixed and small, and others whose income is spasmodic and uncertain. Many of them are in this 24 per cent. These help to comprise what we might call the poorer homes of the city. Under this ordinance proposed before the city council which is to be voted upon next Monday night, there will be a percentage of increase in these homes of all the way from 75 per cent to 175 per cent, while the total percentage which the Electric Light Company receives is only 32 per cent.

To state it yet another way, in order to get this 32 per cent increase for the Electric Light Company, the city council proposes to tax an increase of at least two and one-half times this 32 per cent up to as high as nearly six times this total, upon many least able to bear it. Of course every dollar which is paid by those least able to pay it as an increase over this 32 per cent, decreases the other people's bills by that amount so that as you go from the small user of electric current to the larger user, the percentage of increase on his bill rapidly decreases until it reaches a point with some, and under certain conditions, that he will not actually pay any more and possibly in some cases actually less than he does under the present ordinance.

We believe that such a proposition is indefensible from the standpoint of justice and it certainly places an unfair share of the burden upon the backs of those who are least able to bear that burden to the extent that the amount they use is an indication of their ability. If there is to be a 32 per cent increase in the gross revenue of the Electric Light Company, let that increase come primarily from those who are able and do burn electric current and not from those who do not burn the current. Let it be apportioned with equality and with justice and if anyone is to pay more than the 32 per cent increase, surely we should see to it that those people are not the ones who must keep their bills down both by the number of lamps they use and the current they use, during the month.

We believe this ordinance should be remedied in this respect before being passed. Surely there are brains enough in the city council and the representatives of the Electric Light Company to work out a plan which will be more just than this one.

It could be adjusted by either reducing or permitting a portion of the ready-to-serve charge to be credited to the customer in his payment of the bill and in adding enough to the price of current so as to have this difference made up by those who are using a larger amount of current.

Declares Breakdown

rendering independence of action, we should exert our moral influence to the full toward the promotion of universal peace.

"There is no sentiment whatever towards an alliance such as Clemenceau advocates. If the question were submitted to a popular vote, I doubt if there is a voting precinct in the United States that would vote for any alliance with France or any other European country.

"The European nations have military aspirations, commercial ambitions and colonial policies with which we have no sympathy and with which we can have no part. These interests, wholly their own, would make it impossible for them to consider our position, our wishes or our welfare when they took [illegible]

"I believe that they would be more likely to follow a peaceful course without an alliance than they would if they commanded our resources for the advancement of their interests."

The commoner, though expressing an optimistic tone in considering what the new year may bring to the country, was vigorously opposed to what he termed a country "ruled by the rich."

"The disease from which the country is now suffering," he said, "can best be described as the 'rule of the rich.' This explains the results of the last election. The farmers, one third of our nation, have been turned over to the profiteers for plunder and exploitation. The laboring men were sacrificed to the demands of big corporations and people with small incomes were sacrificed in the interests of those with big incomes.

Attacks Administration

"The present administration is reactionary. The president and his advisers are all honest men, well meaning, and patriotic in purpose but they think that society is suspended from the top instead of being built up from the bottom. They have acted on the theory: let the government take care of the rich and let the rich take care of the poor.

"Plutocracy has never been more bold and it is fortunate that the rebuke came in time to prevent any further reactionary legislation.

"The friends of President Harding are making their last stand in the fight for the ship subsidy. Their motto seems to be: 'get while the getting is good.' Their battle hymn is: 'work, for the night is coming.'

"The bill passed the house by the aid of the congressmen repudiated at the polls.

"I think that the chances are against its passing the senate at all. It might get a majority of the senators who are going out but those who have to go before the people two years hence will be more cautious.

"The president's suggestion, in his recent message that the findings of the labor bureau which he proposes, with the interstate commerce committee be made binding is exactly in line with the desires [illegible] compulsory arbitration which all depends upon the bias of the third man, the umpire. And the umpire will always be on the side of the employers so long as they elect the president.

"I would have, instead, investigation. Investigation brings out facts and public opinion can be relied upon to bring about conciliation when all the facts are known. Compulsory arbitration is not in harmony with our institutions and will not be satisfactory but investigation, leaving the parties independent as to the action as to conclusion, would in nearly every case prevent strikes or lockouts.

"But where a strike or lockout actually occurs, as in the two last summer, I think the best remedy is authority on the part of the government, state and national, insofar as the difficulty is local or general, to take over the business and operate it until employer and employe reach an agreement. The power would not be exercised unless strikes or lockouts were of sufficient magnitude to interference with business.

Must Protect Public

"There is no wrong without a remedy. The government must therefore have power to do anything needed for the protection of the public."

Concerning prohibition Bryan said:

"The enforcement of prohibition is better than the wet papers represent it. They do all that they can to prevent enforcement and then demand the repeal of the law on the ground that it is not enforced. They are not logical or consistent whether there are six automobiles stolen in New York City last year and fewer than half found, yet they do not demand the repeal of the law against stealing automobiles.

"Whenever the federal government has had the cooperation of state and municipal authorities the enforcement of the law has been notably successful. When the local sentiment supports lawlessness and where officials are elected pledged to non-enforcement the situation cannot be entirely satisfactory. There is more patriotism in finding a remedy than in finding fault.

"The president suggests a conference of governors. That will be good. At that meeting a line will be drawn between the dry governors who are working for enforcement and the wet governors who encourage lawlessness.

"The prohibition authorities are greatly discouraged by the fact that wet senators and wet congressmen recommend wet applicants for positions as enforcement officers. It would be as reasonable to expect professional horse thieves to make good sheriffs and prosecute horse thieves.

"New legislation will be necessary from time to time to correct details found in the law. I think a long step would be taken if the federal government would take over all whiskey on hand, paying for it, what it was worth before prohibition gave it a fictitious value. The government could distribute [illegible] as needed for medicine.

"Eliminate Smugglers"

"But just now one of the most imperative needs is legislation which will drive the smugglers from our coasts. It is absurd to invoke the three mile limit rule for the protection of smugglers. That rule was never intended for any such situation as we now have. It was intended to protect for search [illegible] the three mile limit of legitimate trading vessels. These liquor [illegible] crafts now are engaged in illegitimate business. They belong to a pirate class. They deliberately [illegible] against the laws of the United States. No civilized nation can afford to permit its flag to be used for such a purpose, and no friendly nation will seek to protect vessels thus disgracing its flag when the subject is properly presented to them. Our government should assume that no friendly nation would willingly have any part in conspiracies against our laws. We should notify those governments of what is going on and say to them that if they find it impossible to [illegible] with the situation from a distance we will relieve them of the trouble and deal with them as criminals where we find them.

"Prohibition is the permanent policy of this country. There is not the slightest prospect of a return to the old conditions."

AUTO THIEF SUSPECT SHOT IN GUN FIGHT

CINCINNATI, Dec. 13.—John Turner, alias Jack Ross, 26, Lexington, Ky., is in a serious condition at the General hospital following a running pistol duel with Cincinnati detectives. A woman giving the name of Miss Dorothy Lingle, 22, Lexington, and Albert Walsh, 31, former jockey, are being detained for further investigation.

Turner is to be questioned regarding his possession of steel dies used in the changing of automobile engine numbers and a large quantity of automobile transfer bills of sale. It is said he is wanted in several cities including Dayton, O., Pittsburg and Louisville in connection with auto thefts.

A Fair Offer. Accept It.
I extend a cordial invitation to anyone suffering with catarrh to call and see Hyomei. I will refund the money if Hyomei does not relieve. C. W. Phillips. Adv.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

What Madge Won Mrs. Barker to Promise.

I WASTED no time in formalities with Mrs. Barker as I entered the dining-room in search of her, and saw the disapproving frown upon the face which she turned toward me. I took from my face the mask of airy artlessness which I had put on for her benefit, and pocketed it where I could get at it handily when I should encounter the veranda tabbies. And it was with a mien almost as forbidding as her own that I accosted her.

"May I have three minutes of your time where no one can hear us?" I asked.

She looked at me searchingly for a second, and then, her face clearing, she waved her hand toward a door at the side of the dining-room.

"Come into my own sitting-room," she said. "It is small, but it is the only place I can call my own, and no one comes near it unless I say so."

"I could well believe that," I said to myself, as I followed her into an austere, plainly furnished, but comfortable little sitting-room, and took the chair to which she motioned me.

"Now," she said, closing the door, and moving a chair opposite mine, "what's on your mind? Thought better of trying to pull the wool over my eyes with that 'best friend' stuff?"

"Something like that," I rejoined promptly, although the bluntness of the attack, coupled with the keen insight it betrayed, startled me. "I am going to lay the exact case before you, and I am sure you will approve of my course."

A Frank Confession.

"Humph," she responded non-committally. "Go on."

"In the first place," I said briskly, "Miss Foster is not my best friend, nor even a very dear one. But I know her quite well. She has been a guest at my home, and I would stake my life upon the certainty that in this absurd performance there has been nothing really wrong. But I realize as you do, that she has been highly indiscreet, as well as most inconsiderate of me.

"Naturally," I went on, "I do not particularly relish coming up here, either to see her or my husband, whom I blame far more than I do her. But, Mrs. Barker, I have a little boy, and my husband has an old mother. For their sakes, as well as my own, I must silence gossip. Can you tell me any better method with most people than the one I am taking? It doesn't deceive you, of course, but isn't it really the best, after all?"

She looked at me steadily for a long minute.

Mrs. Barker Apologizes.

"It isn't often I'm mistaken in my judgment," she said, and I thought whimsically of Disko Troop, "and when I am I'm ready to acknowledge it. I knew you weren't the fool unsuspecting baby you seemed, but I thought maybe you were trying to gloss over this because you had been cutting up some caper of your own that you wanted your husband to overlook."

I could repress neither a wrathful start nor the flaming of my cheeks at this interpretation of my coming to the rescue of Dicky and Claire Foster.

"You needn't be disturbed," Mrs. Barker said coolly. "I just told you I knew I was mistaken. I believe what you have just told me, and I agree with you that you're taking the best course. And I'll help you all I can, which, I guess, will be by keeping out of your way as much as possible. I'm free to tell you that I don't cotton much to either your husband or Miss Foster, and the less I see of them the less apt I'll be to say things."

"That will be perfectly all right," I answered, glad, indeed, to have found her so tractable. "But may I ask you to set a place for Miss Foster at the table? She will have supper with us."

"Going to exhibit her, are you?" Mrs. Barker gave a short, unpleasant little laugh, then turned to me with contrition written on her face.

"Excuse me," she said awkwardly, and I guessed that she was not much used to asking pardon of anyone. "I'm not usually so bad-mannered, but the idea of your treating that hussy as though she were something way up in G seems awful funny and strange to me."

"But Mrs. Barker," I pleaded, with an honest effort to modify the woman's patent prejudice. "You are wrong about her. She is simply a headstrong and indiscreet girl. She is not in the least in love with my husband, and she has not hurt me except by embarrassing me with this publicity. And we must remember that she is young."

"She's old enough to know better," Mrs. Barker returned uncompromisingly. "But I'll keep my mouth shut, and let her get away in peace, and I'll help you all I can."

There was a short business meeting led by the president, Mrs. Fred Kellogg. The question of Hot Lunches was discussed and the committee will visit elsewhere that they may obtain more information on this subject. Supt. Marshall gave a short talk on Illiteracy in the U. S. as compared to other countries and urged co-operation of the people. The rest of the evening was then given over to the speaker. He chose for his topic: "The 20th Century Man." It was the best speech ever delivered here. He explained how straight forward thinking to the end should become a more active part of life than ever before, and to give up the best there is in you is sacrafice. Who can estimate the influence of such a speech presented in such a happy manner on the lives of our young people. A light lunch was served by the refreshment committee.

A MOVEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Certain elements, progressive and more or less radical, are meeting in Cleveland officially representing many people in the United States, but actually expressing only the views of those who agree with them.

The important question before them, is whether the progressive ideas which were proposed as their program shall be furthered by a separate political party or by an independent movement working within the parties as they are.

In Washington a few days ago a large group of progressives gathered together and framed a program. In Cleveland representatives of a great number of people are, from a slightly different angle, carrying out the same general idea.

Congressman Knight announces that on the 12th of February, Senator Borah is to speak in Akron at which time there will be a gathering for conference of Ohio progressives.

No single individual looms above the horizon with sufficient power of personality and leadership to take this progressive movement as his individual baggage. It cannot be tied up today, to the success or failure of any single man. The sentiment exists within the minds of the rank and file of millions of people. They care more for ideas than they do for men. They are interested in a program and policy more than they are in a personality and ambition.

In our judgment, this outbreaking attempt in different parts of the country to co-ordinate forward looking sentiment into a definite program is the most significant phenomenon that has appeared in recent political happenings.

LET IT BE IN THE OPEN

The preliminary work of the prosecution and impeachment of Attorney Daugherty is in full swing.

There have been very serious charges brought against Mr. Daugherty, and we believe that the good of the country and of the administration demands the most complete and comprehensive investigation which can be had. If these charges are without foundation, the people should know it.

Mr. Daugherty should insist on the committee giving the freest possible range to the evidences of this investigation. We do not believe that the public will consider it just and fair, or in the interest of the obtaining of truth, to demand that all that counts should be thrown out except that which Congressman Keller has a personal knowledge of. He happens to be prosecutor, to be sure, but if we could deal in the same manner with our prosecuting attorney, insisting that no evidence should be produced regarding the accused of which the prosecutor himself did not have personal knowledge, there would be no prosecution and crime would run rampant.

We trust that this position of the committee will not prevail. We believe that much against an accused public official is believed by the public in the event the committee which is investigating it, is of the same political complexion as the accused, and providing this committee refuses on any hypothesis to permit the facts concerning this particular transaction to be brought before the public.

We believe that this whole investigation, if carried on openly, frankly, and nobly, will be a great blessing to the country and to the administration and if the general rumors which are afloat are unfounded, it will be the greatest blessing of all to Mr. Daugherty himself.

The man whose record can stand the search light of such an investigation and come out unscarred is a man in whom the people of the country can hereafter repose the greatest trust.

GETTING BUSY QUICKLY

Senator Smith Brookhart of Iowa, and Senator James Couzens of Michigan, organized the progressive forces of the Senate to the extent of demanding that the consideration of the subsidy bill be postponed until farmer credits were disposed of.

These are the two baby members of the Senate. The execution of this labor by these, considering their inexperience, brings them out into the lime light as strong doers.

They will be heard from very much in the future.

TIMOTHY HEALY

Slightly less astounding than his appointment was the precedent-smashing method by which Timothy Healy was inducted into the office of governor-general of Ireland.

TIMOTHY HEALY

After years of strife between Ireland and Britain, in which Healy has been prominently identified sometimes as a hero, and sometimes as the most hated man in Ireland, the Free State became a reality.

The naming of Haly to the post of governor-general was nothing less than a sensation. Then King George cast precedent to the winds and announced that for the first time in history the formality of kissing the king's hand in the royal confines of Buckingham palace as the formal acceptance of the post would be dispensed with.

Instead Healy became governor-general on the receipt of cabled orders from King George, received at his Dublin residence.

Healy started his political career as a secretary to Parnell. Later he became estranged, politically, and developed into his bitterest opponent.

For nearly thirty-eight years Healy sat in the British parliament as a Nationalist delegate. During that period he represented various constituencies.

At all times a radical independent, a master of parliamentary practice with commanding eloquence, he reportedly indulged in bitter personal fights with his Irish colleagues. But whether they agreed with Healy or not all admired his ability.

He is a lawyer by profession, highly educated and a brilliant writer.

POEMS THAT LIVE

THE CELESTIAL SURGEON

If I have faltered more or less
In my great task of happiness;
If I have moved among my race
And shown no glorious morning face;
If beams from happy human eyes
Have moved me not; if morning skies,
Books, and my food, and summer rain
Knocked on my sullen heart in vain:—
Lord, thy most pointed pleasure take
And stab my spirit broad awake;
Or, Lord, if too obdurate I,
Choose thou, before that spirit die,
A piercing pain, a killing sin,
And to my dead heart run them in.

Did you ever notice how many "trick religions" they're springing on us lately?

Far be it from me to differ with any of the brothers, but I'll bet there aint many barbers in "The house of David."

I was out in Salt Lake City once, and I don't fancy any of the followers of Brigham Young. One is plenty for me.

Some of 'em let you get married to as many wives as you wish, and some of 'em make you wear your hair down to your knees. And they all claim, "It's in the Bible."

Couple of years ago they started "The gift of Tongues" and it went over big for a while. Guess they were mostly women.

Some of 'em wont let the clergy marry, and some don't pay 'em enough to support a wife if they did.

Others don't eat meat on Friday and lots of 'em don't even look out the window on Sunday. Take your choice. They all claim to originate in the same "Book."

The fellows who don't believe in working on Saturday look rather smart to me. They have two holidays every week.

Looks to me as though religion is a good deal like having a hair lip—you're born that way.

They are all trying to get to the same place, but it really looks as though some of 'em will have to take a detour.

Funny thing about it is they all claim to be right and there's thousands of them—so—who's wrong?

One thing you have to admit, none of 'em seem to do anyone any harm.

Now I see where women are being ordained ministers. If they're good looking, it ought to help the attendance.

Aint a bad idea at that. Now suppose a fellow was on his death bed and a good looking lady minister came in, how many men would be mean enough to "cash in" with her holding his hand?

I was reading an ad about "Fireproof furniture." The ad said, "It was for office buildings," but I was listening to a sermon the following Sunday and the thought occurred to me that it wouldn't be a bad idea to take along—say—a rocking chair.

Say what they will about the churches. They're a good place to spend an hour on Sunday. Of course some fellows can't keep awake—but you find the same thing in the movies.

GOMPERS FIRST IMPEACHMENT WITNESS

Testifies in Daugherty Hearing That Burns' Appointment Was a Public Scandal

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Acrimonious wrangling between members of the judiciary committee of the house and those who are seeking the impeachment of Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, again marked the progress of the proceedings when they got under way today.

Representatives of organized labor, represented by Jackson Ralston, chief counsel for the A. F. of L resumed its attack on the attorney general.

Flay Burns Appointment

Exclusion of some evidence by the judiciary committee led to a threat by Ralston to obtan an order from the full house of representatives, for the production of the evidence he wished to present.

Ralston frequently clashed with Representative Volstead, republican of Minnesota, chairman of the committee, over his ruling out of certain evidence, which alleged "indecent conduct on the part of William J. Burns, whom Daugherty made chief of the bureau of investigation.

Daugherty's appointment of Burns is one of the acts upon which the attorney general's enemies seek his impeachment. They allege Burns is "unfit" and consequently Daugherty, by appointing him, also is "unfit" for the high office he holds.

Ralston said he would show that burns was "guilty of almost continuous indecent conduct from 1905 to the date of his appointment."

"I want to say for Mr. Burns, he has denied it all and I have enough confidence in Mr. Burns to believe him," said Representative Graham, republican, of Pennsylvania.

"Before we are through you will change your opinion," Ralston retorted.

"I call attention now that if this evidence is excluded without argument from me, I will stand upon my rights even if it is necessary to get a call from the full house to produce the evidence."

"Is that a threat?" Graham inquired.

"It is a threat," Representative Yates, republican, Illinois, interposed. "It is up to you gentlment to decide what it was," Ralston replied. "I intend to have this evidence considered."

Gompers Testifies

Samuel Gompers, president of the American federation of labor, was the first witness. He branded Burns appointment as a public scandal, and told the committee he had so informed Attorney General Daugherty.

Cross examined by Paul Howland of Cleveland, Daugherty's attorney, Gompers denied all knowledge of the impeachment resolution until he "saw it in the news papers." He denied being instrumental in its filing by Representative Keller.

Gompers declared he had published certain articles in a labor paper concerning Burns "to expose a man who had been guilty of a great wrong."

Former attorney general George W. Wickersham testified he had also opposed Burns' appointment.

Wickersham said he "may have written" a letter for A. Bruce Bielaski for the post but he really didn't have a candidate instead of Burns.

Wickersham dealt with his report to President Taft on the Jones pardon case which involved the so-called Oregon land fraud cases. He said he had called Daugherty's attention to this report in protesting against Burns' appointment. Part of the records produced showed Burns had been interested in the jury which had heard the Jones case.

Opposed Burns Also

The only laugh of the day's session came while Wickersham was on the stand.

"How did Oregon go in the convention that year?" Representative Thomas, democrat of Kentucky, asked Wickersham. "Did it go for Taft or Roosevelt?"

"I don't know," Wickersham declared.

"No one else seems to know either," Thomas retorted.

In telling of how he called Daugherty's attention to Burns connection with the Jones pardon case, Wickersham said he had done so because he thought it would interest the attorney general.

"Did you have a candidate instead of Burns?" he was asked.

"No, I may have written a letter for A. Bruce Bielaski," Wickersham replied. "I didn't really favor any particular person. I was only opposed to Burns."

"The president is requested," said the committee's report, "to enter into negotiations with the governments of Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, the same powers that composed the Washington conference, with a view to reaching an understanding or agreement relative to limiting the construction of all types and sizes of sub-surface and surface crafts of 10,000 tons displacement or less, and of aircraft."

More Work to Finish

The committee had high praise for the work accomplished by the Washington arms conference, but stated it had not gone far enough.

"The conference did not limit the number and types of vessels coming up to or under the 10,000 ton and 8 inch gun limits, either in the way of surface or subsurface craft, nor did it impose any limitation whatever on aircraft," said the committee.

"It is the committee's information that already large programs are planned of vessels up to the maximum size permitted and new and larger types of subsurface craft (submarines) have begun to put in an appearance.

"In other words, competition is on again in the single direction to which the unratified agreement does not extend, and if it be allowed to go on unchecked the purse strings must be relaxed and this government like all others will be constrained to launch upon a new program to the extent to keep us at least abreast of any of the other powers."

"The duty of the statesmen of the world seems clear," continued the committee. "They owe it to their respective peoples to join in a new movement to put a stop once and for all to the needless [illegible] sion of vast wealth and energy from the fields of peaceful pursuit.

"The committee therefore is proposing in this bill that appropriate steps be taken with a view to supplementing the epoch making work of the conference on the limitation of armament."

Plan More Limitations

That the Washington conference took no steps to limit auxiliary craft and submarines was due to the opposition of France. All the other powers were willing to extend the limitation all down the line, but France, smarting under what her delegates considered [illegible] French national dignity in the 5-5-3-1.75-1.75 proportion, steadfastly refused to consider limitation of auxiliary naval vessels, submarines or aircraft. [illegible] their opposition to the [illegible] near break in the conference [illegible] led to many bitter exchanges between the French and British delegates.

The British charged the French with aiming at a huge submarine program to offset their naval supremacy in other fields.

Whether France has undergone a change of policy and would now consent to come into a new agreement on submarines and aircraft is not known in Washington, but in view of her refusal thus far to ratify the treaties that grew out of the conference here a year ago, and the continued [illegible] in the Near East and Europe, doubt was felt here this afternoon that France would consent to take part in another limitation conference.

Great Britain, Japan and Italy, the other principal naval powers of the world, are believed favorable to such a conference as is now proposed.

SAYS FRENCH DEBT DEMAND BLOCKING PAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—America can expect no early payment of foreign war debts, while Germany, the key to the situation, is held in a state of "serfdom," by unreasonable demands of the French, and other allies, declared Representative Theodore E. Burton, member of the American debt commission, in a speech today before the Washington association of credit men. Burton recently reutrned from a European tour.

He painted a dark picture of Europe's financial and political chaos and asserted that the Russian and Turkish situations are menacing.

Burton, decrying pleas for debt cancellation, said in the adjustment of those obligations the United States should pursue a "liberal" policy to help many of the debtors get on their feet again. He did not believe the time of payment of the principal on the obligations should be fixed by any hard and fast rule, nor did he believe that a rigid rule should be laid down as to rates of interest. Regarding Europe's present commercial strife, he said:

"For Europe, the remedy is not cancellation of debts to us, but in the adoption of more rational fiscal policies, abatement of military expenses.

"If the debts should be released it may well be questioned whether other countries would not become larger creditors than the United States.

Burton said the United States with only a 15 years' supply of petroleum may in the future have to draw from the oil stocks of the countries largely under the control of the foreign debtor.

"These facts should give us pause in considering any proposition for release of loans made by the United States to foreign countries," he said. "It should be remembered that $2,500,000,000 of of the $10,000,000,000 borrowed from us, was borrowed after the armistice, and not strictly for war purposes."

He declared a good policy for this government to pursue would be to sequester in the United States treasury any bonds or other classes of obligations obtained from foreign governments. He favored the idea of reloaning to some of the debtor countries, under proper safeguards, of a reasonable part of the amounts paid for constructive purposes in countires involved.

Clemenceau

kerchiefs. Women, overcome by emotion sobbed.

Here Three Weeks

Three weeks of continuous travel and speechmaking had left little mark of fatigue upon the 80 year old statesman. His eye was bright, his step alert and his voice vigorous as he spoke.

Tremendous importance was attached to an exclusive statement on French policy made by Clemenceau to International News Service just before he sailed. The former premier, who is still a power in French politics, said:

"I do not want to see the French army go into the Ruhr. I fear the consequences of such a move. I am afraid of the effect of such occupation upon the German democracy, already bearing a heavy burden, and having a hard struggle with the junkers. No real Frechman wants to annex a foot of German territory."

Clemenceau's dictum is just the oppocite to the present policy of Premier Poincare who is insisting upon military occupation of the "German Ruhr."

M. Clemenceau received the following telegram of farewell from former president Woodrow Wilson, his old peace conference colleague:

"Allow me to bid you an affectionate farwell and to congratulate you on the admiration you have won from our people. All good fortune attend you."

Replies to Wilson

M. Clemenceau sent the following reply:

"I cannot but be most grateful for the kind message you have been so good to send me. Your feelings are mine. All your efforts for the best, that you did not spare while in our country, are those of the French people, and can be summed up in these words: 'justice and peace to all.' There are French principles as well as those of America. My best wishes for your health and welfare and kindest regards to Mrs. Wilson."

To Otto Kahn, the international banker, M. Clemenceau sent the following message:

"I can but thank you and express all of my gratification for what you have done towards the great work of international peace, as is the everlasting wish of France as well as America. I know you have done your best for the cause. Allow me to congratulate you in advance for all that you will and can do. With best wishes and kindest regards."

Chats With Friends

As Clemenceau shook hands and chatted with friends and admirers, he exclaimed:

"My ghost will return but I am probably seeing these glorious shores for the last time in flesh."

There was a touch of sadness in the care lined face as the aged statesman, regardless of a biting wind, pulled off his hat and waved it.

"Don't forget the love letter you promised to write me. You grand old man," cried Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, wife of the artist, at whose home M. Clemenceau was a guest.

The "tiger" smiled.

"And don't tell Dana when you write," added Mrs. Gibson.

Colonel E. M. House and Bernard Baruch, financial advisers to the American delegation at the Paris peace conference, headed a large crowd of admirers at the pier.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 13.—Roy Cornelius, 38, is in a hospital today suffering from a fractured skull and concussion of the brain and may die, while Mrs. Cornelius and Mr. and Mrs. James Burns are being questioned by police as to the means by which he was injured.

EAT VEGETABLES IF KIDNEYS HURT YOU

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat often too much red meat and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus often ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Advt.

City War Memorial

J. F. Burke then addressed the meeting and dealt with the effect that such a building would have on the community, and the necessity of a memorial which would not only be of practical use and benefit but which would still preserve for future citizens the memory of the men and women who were in service and keep alive the ideals for which the war was fought and won. He said that because of greed, selfishness, and the wish for aggrandizement of various nations that these ideals had to a great extent lost, and that if for no other reason there should be something in real and lasting form which would remind future generations of these aims. A public hall or memorial building seemed to him the best form for such a reminder. He concluded by offering his services in every way possible.

To Name Committee.

The members of the post then voted that they would further the erection of a memorial hall, and a committee is to be appointed from the Post to confer with various organizations of the city, and to investigate the possibilities of erecting such a buildings as is desired.

WOMEN SURPRISE

CLEVELAND, Dec. 13. — Another ancient theory has been exploded.

While practically every male delegate to the conference for progressive political action clamored again and again for an opportunity to voice his views, the women maintained silence. The only time one of the sex supposed to want "the last word" took the floor was when a lady from Oklahoma moved to shut off debate. She took exactly six seconds to have her say.

According to an old superstition the first to cry at a wedding will be the next to marry.

In Holland more than 10,000 acres are devoted to the cultivation of bulbs.

YOUR CHRISTMAS WITHOUT ELECTRICITY

A hundred years ago this statement would have not caused a stir but try it today---Try it tomorrow or another day and learn what a great benefactor this invisible force is.

If it is not possible to have Electricity this Christmas Mother's Percolator will not function and the day is ruined---Sister's new curler will not heat and anyway those one heats over a fire do not curl worth a darn and John's evening is one that he will remember. Brother's Electric Train will not move at all and Oh what a Christmas. Dad's entire day would be a calamity if he did not have enough stuff in his radio outfit to listen good, and what's a day without a radio concert or lecture.

And there would be no interurbans operating this day---no pleasant trip in your automobile---think what it means.

The Christmas Tree to be erected in the city park by the Young Men's Business Club would be a still affair if there were no lights toblazen forth the Spirit of Christmas good cheer and further the Christmas Carolers might meet with an unfortunate accident in making their rounds if the street lights were out.

And imagine the consternation and troubled face, if when your children came tripping down the stairs they found the tree in darkness, when just the night before everything was set to have the electric candles light Santa's way. You would feel worse than the children about it.

You may rest assured that there will be current on this day of days if---
